

HISTORY MADE IN ANCIENT CHATEAU AS DUKE OF WINDSOR TAKES AS BRIDE ONE FOR WHOM HE RENOUNCED THRONE

Dr. Charles Mercier, Mayor of Monts, Intones Solemn Phrases, With Rev. Jardine Then Marrying Famous Couple Under Ritual of Church of England

(Editor's Note:—Kenneth T. Downs, chief Paris correspondent of International News Service, was one of three American newspapermen permitted to witness the marriage of the Duke of Windsor to Mrs. Wallis Warfield, at the Chateau de Candes, today.)

MONTs, France, June 3—History was made and tender romance climaxed in the ancient Chateau de Candes today, when the Duke of Windsor took as his bride the woman for whom he renounced a throne and an empire, Mrs. Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore.

First a civil and then a religious ceremony joined the world's renowned couple in the bond of matrimony.

Dr. Charles Mercier, the mayor of Monts, intoned the solemn but simple phrases which united the pair under the laws of France. And a few moments later, vicar of the Church of England who braved ecclesiastical wrath to sooth his own conscience to unite the Duke to an American-born bride in a religious ceremony they devoutly desires, married them under the old, somewhat terrifying, ritual of the Church of England. He was the Rev. R. Anderson Jardine, vicar of St. Paul's, Dartington, in whose life the next chapter will be a forced appearance before his ecclesiastical superiors for a rebuke and perhaps more.

Only four persons in addition to the little mayor of Monts witnessed the civil ceremony, but 48 were present in the flower-banked music room when the Rev. Jardine united the blue-clad Mrs. Warfield and the Duke in a religious ceremony.

They included 16 invited guests, a list made notable by the fact it contained the names of no dignitaries or members of the peerage, for the British government had ruled against it. The officials of Tours and Monts had paved the way for the wedding and a handful of newspapermen and photographers. Standing before an improvised altar, the Rev. Jardine read from his prayer book the time-honored words:

"We are gathered here together in the sight of God and in the presence of this congregation to join together this man and this woman in Holy Matrimony."

"This is an honorable estate instituted by the hand of God . . . and therefore not to be entered into nor taken in hand unadvised, lightly or wantonly to satisfy man's carnal lust and appetites like brute beasts that have no understanding."

These stern and forceful words, the hearty little vicar read in a firm but kindly voice. They are part of the Church of England's rites—the rites that the Archbishop of Canterbury strove to relieve the former King and his bride from observing.

Later came the words, old, but ever new:

"Wilt thou, Your Royal Highness, take this woman as thy lawful wife?"

And:

"Wilt thou, Wallis, take this man as thy lawful husband?"

Outside the gates of the Chateau a crowd of several hundred shouted: "Long live the Duke and the Duchess" again and again when the newlyweds posed on the steps of the Chateau for photographers.

If ever there was a radiant, happy bride, it was the Duchess of Windsor today, and if there ever was a happy bridegroom, it was the Duke. He shook hands with everyone in the flower-banked music room where the ceremony was performed, and not even the lowliest servant missed the thrill of a royal hand clasp.

There Rector Who Married Duke Will Be "Put On the Carpet"

HE MUST EXPLAIN

(Copyrighted by I. N. S.)

LONDON, June 3—His bestowal of religious blessings on the wedding of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield, threatened today to cost the Rev. R. Anderson Jardine, the vicar of St. Paul's, Dartington, his parish, and his future ecclesiastical career.

The liberal named little "poor man's pastor," who volunteered to marry the Duke and Mrs. Warfield twice divorced, in a religious ceremony today, and was accepted for the task, will be summoned before the parochial council of St. Paul at its next meeting, at the end of the month.

There he will be "put on the carpet" and asked to explain his failure to consult his ecclesiastical superiors before undertaking to marry the former monarch and the twice divorced American woman in defiance of the Church of England's approval.

Seaver, of Nesaminy Farms, was one of the champions at the Devon Horse Show this year in the $10000 touch and out class. "DeValera" has been entered in the stake and high-jumping classes at Bristol.

Another horse of distinction is "Sergeant Joe," owned by N. H. Wagner, who will make his first appearance at Bristol. Known as the "Olympic Horse," he has won in such places as Atlantic City and other prominent horse shows.

FILM COSMETICIAN INSTRUCTS WOMEN TO "LOOK NATURAL"

Declares Screen Stars Generally Use Less Make-Up in Their Everyday Life Than Other Groups

By Milton Barker
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HOLLYWOOD, June 3.—(INS)—Declaring the whole secret of a woman's make-up is to "look natural," Jack Dawn, one of Hollywood's most famous cosmeticians, has sounded a warning that "you can't copy the movie stars' makeup and get away with it."

"Looking natural requires only one thing—common sense," he said, pointing out the screen stars as a whole probably use less makeup in everyday life than any other group of women.

"Make-up for the screen is very different from make-up for the street," said Dawn, head make-up man at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. "In the first place it photographs black and white, or variations of grey. These same intensities, carried out in color, would give a decidedly startling effect."

Because every face in the world is individual the same principles seldom apply to all, he explained.

"Stars on the screen realize this," he said. "You never find them copying each other's characteristics. Why, then, should the average woman attending a theatre go home and attempt to apply a make-up exactly resembling that seen on the screen?"

"Women should be extremely careful in using rouge. They should always remember that red is the most conspicuous color of nature. That is why it is used for traffic lights and danger signals. A bright red splotch on each cheek completely blots out every other feature of the face."

And then Dawn gives a little advice: "The proper manner to choose make-up is to find a powder foundation and a powder matching, as nearly as possible, the color of the skin."

"Rouge, if used at all, should be extremely light for daytime wear and only the slightest bit heavier for evening."

"Every day, girls from one end of the country to the other ruin their natural beauty by endeavoring to copy eyebrows, lip, eye make-up and other features which they feel characterize certain screen celebrities. If they were only able to see these same stars off the screen they might learn something about effective make-up for the street. As a whole they use less make-up in everyday life than any other group of women."

"Being before the cameras has taught them the value of being natural"

Forger to Jail

On way to prison to serve a three-to-six year term for embezzlement, Mrs. Helen Harper, society matron, is shown leaving New York court after being sentenced for appropriating $57,000 of her firm's money. Mrs. Harper had been the object of a nation-wide search for months after she disappeared from her Long Island, N. Y., home.

In their make-up off the screen, I have yet to see a person, in Hollywood for the first time, who doesn't comment on the fact that the stars wear less make-up than any of their non-professional friends. Yet many non-professional women cover their faces with powder and rouge in an attempt to look like a star."

Dawn said it is impossible for a woman to wear too little make-up during the daytime.

Only in the matter of coiffures did he draw an exception to his rule on copying the stars as they appear on the flickers.

"To copy exactly would be impossible, since no one has yet been able to do two heads in exactly the same manner," he said. "In the first place, the hair grows differently on every head."

"The most a woman can do, therefore, is to take suggestions from a certain coiffure from the screen. This, in itself, is a good idea. Women, as a whole, are too prone to find one hair style and stick to it, despite the fact that another hair-do would give her a new lease on life. Then, too, women are able to tell when a hair-dress is unbecomingly much more rapidly than when a spot of rouge ruins her entire appearance."

And for his last word to the ladies: "Go to the movies and try every new coiffure that strikes your fancy, but don't figure that a black line over your eyelids will add that touch of glamour."

One-half cup butter, two egg yolks, one quarter teaspoon salt, few grains cayenne, one tablespoon lemon juice.

Wash butter or not, as preferred. Divide in three pieces. Put one piece in heavy bowl with egg yolks and lemon juice. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly with wire whisk until butter melts. Add second piece of butter and as mixture thickens, add third piece. Remove from fire, season and if mixture curdles, add two tablespoons heavy cream, or boiling water, drop by drop. Any boiled or steamed vegetable will be dressed up by this sauce.

Date Nut Bread

One of the many delicious foods which makes use of the nourishing and moisture-preserving qualities of honey is this bread, which would be a welcome addition to any luncheon, or to the Summer picnic basket.

One cup dates, one cup boiling water, two tablespoons shortening, one cup honey, one egg, one and one-half cups flour, one-quarter teaspoon salt, two teaspoons baking powder, one cup nuts.

Cut dates in small pieces. Cook in the boiling water until done. Mix until thick. Cool. Cream honey and shortening, add beaten egg, date mixture and nuts. Sift together dry ingredients and add. Bake in moderate oven 325 degrees F. for one hour and 20 minutes. This recipe yields one loaf and was the prize-winning recipe in a 1936 national contest for honey dishes.

Apple Pancakes

Sliced apples, three cups flour, one and one-half teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt, one-quarter cup sugar, two cups milk, one egg, two tablespoons melted butter.

Mix and sift the dry ingredients, beat egg, add milk and pour slowly on first mixture. Beat thoroughly and add butter. Sauté the sliced apples lightly and quickly in butter. Pour the batter over the apples and allow to spread out to form a thin round cake. Turn when brown on under side. When thoroughly cooked, transfer carefully to a hot plate and roll and powder with sugar.

Frizzy Crepe Suzette

Four tablespoons flour, two ounces almond paste, two eggs, salt, four tablespoons powdered sugar, one and one-half teaspoons orange juice, four egg yolks, one pint cream.

Mix batter smooth. Melt two ounces butter in a saucepan. Pour a portion of butter in frying pan, then pour in batter thinly brown on both sides, place on a hot plate and serve with powdered sugar and orange juice. These also are served with tart jam or marmalade.

Quick Croquettes

A timely variation from roast beef and lamb is a tender roast of veal. And nothing makes more delicious croquettes about the middle of the week, when the Sunday roast is a sorry wreck. Left-over peas go into this dish, too, so it is a real economy meal.

One cup cooked green peas, one and three-fourths cups cooked veal, ground; one-half teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, two teaspoons grated onion, one-half cup dry bread crumbs, one egg, two tablespoons cold water, fat for deep frying.

Mash cooked peas. Add veal, salt, pepper and onion and mix well. Place in refrigerator and chill. (This may be done early in the day.) When ready for use, shape into croquettes and roll in bread crumbs, or fine cracker meal. Combine egg and cold water and beat slightly. Dip croquettes in egg mixture, then roll again in bread crumbs. Drop in deep, pure vegetable fat, heated to 375 degrees F. and fry until golden brown.

Tomato sauce is a good partner for these croquettes. A few drops of Worcestershire sauce may be added to mixture.

Sand Tarts

This easy recipe comes from Sweden.

Two cups sugar, one cup butter, one-half cup other shortening, two eggs, three cups flour, one-half teaspoon almond extract.

Mix the butter and other shortening and cream with sugar. Add the unbeaten eggs, the sifted flour and the flavoring. Form into small balls and bake, two inches apart, on a greased cookie sheet, in a slow oven for 10 minutes.

COOL DESERTS

Are you using your refrigerator to aid you in the preparation of delectable springtime desserts? If you are not, you are certain to be missing an opportunity to produce sweets tempting to eye and palate alike.

Sorbet Delicious

4 cups water

½ cup lemon juice
1½ cups grape juice

1 cup milk
½ cup sugar
3 egg yolks
¼ teaspoon salt
2 squares chocolate
½ tablespoon gelatine soaked in
¼ cup cold water

3 egg whites
¼ cup sugar
1 cup cream
1½ cups vanilla wafer crumbs or cake crumbs

Make a custard of milk, sugar, chocolate and egg yolks. Add soaked gelatine and dissolve. Cool. Fold in beaten egg whites and add the ¼ cup of sugar. Line a buttered pie tin with crushed vanilla wafers, add filling. Cover with waxed paper and place in refrigerator 4 to 5 hours. Serve with whipped cream.

Angel Parfait

1/3 cup sugar
4 tablespoons water
2 egg whites
½ pint cream
1½ teaspoons vanilla
candied pineapple or cherries
Maraschino cherries
Preserved ginger

Stir sugar and water until sugar is melted. Boil without stirring until sugar spins a thread from tip of spoon. Add slowly to egg whites beaten until stiff. Continue beating until mixture is cool. Chill, then add cream, whipped, and vanilla. Fill small molds or paper parfait cups with this mixture. In the center of each put a teaspoon of chopped candied fruit, preserved ginger, maraschino cherries or a combination of these fruits. Place molds in chilling unit of refrigerator and allow to freeze.

REQUESTED RECIPES

Chocolate Cookies

The recipe for these cookies won a prize, and they will prove a prize to have on hand, since the honey keeps them moist and fresh.

One cup honey, or substitute; one cup shortening, two cups oatmeal, two squares bitter chocolate, one teaspoon vanilla, two eggs, two cups flour, three-fourths teaspoon soda, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one teaspoon cinnamon, one-fourth cup sour milk, one cup chopped nut meats.

Cream honey and shortening. Add oatmeal, chocolate and vanilla. Add beaten eggs. Sift together dry ingredients. Add alternately with milk. Add nuts and drop on greased cookie sheet. Bake for 15 minutes at 350 degrees F. This yields seven dozen.

Children's Milk Shake

To one cup whole milk add one-fourth cup of unsweetened canned pineapple juice and one scoop vanilla ice cream. Have milk and juice thoroughly chilled.

Shake vigorously, or blend with electric mixer. If the children are having a little tea party, serve cookies with this drink. And don't forget Straws!

PRICES ENCOURAGE NEW USES OF VEAL

With veal the only meat that is not advancing steadily in price, it behooves the thrifty housewife to become acquainted with cuts other than veal chops, and the somewhat luxurious veal cutlet.

Veal requires long, slow cooking because of the large proportion of connecting tissues. It is deficient in fat and therefore should have pork or butter added while cooking, and generous seasoning, not forgetting a few drops of some sauce, parsley and celery leaves.

Shoulder of veal may be stuffed appetizingly, if you have the butcher remove the bones. Then there is fricassee of veal, veal pie with vegetables and crust, veal loaf, stuffed cushion of veal (from the upper part of the leg), veal patties or croquettes, and excellent curry with veal.

Seven cuts of veal are suitable for roasting. They are rib, leg, rump, loin, breasts, shoulder and chuck. A shoulder roast requires more cooking than a leg. Loin of veal, prepared with vegetables, makes a satisfying one-dish meal. Here is the method.

Four-pound loin of veal, four tablespoons butter, salt and pepper to season, flour, hot water, two cups each cooked cubed turnips and carrots and two cups cooked potato balls.

Wipe veal, sprinkle with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Melt butter in deep sauce pan. Add veal and brown entire surface of meat, turning frequently to prevent burning. Add one cup hot water, cover and cook slowly two hours, or until meat is tender, adding more water as needed, using about three cups in all. Remove meat, thicken stock in pan with flour paste, and serve meat on large platter with heated turnips, carrots and potatoes. Other vegetables may be substituted, if preferred. Serves eight.

NEARLY CLEAN SWEEP

EL PASO, Tex.—(INS)—The next time Private T. N. Ward of Fort Bliss

goes to sleep, it won't be in his automobile on an El Paso street. Ward solemnly reported to city detectives that while he slumbered blissfully on, thieves stole his shoes, coat and shirt . . . then jacked up his automobile and took two wheels and the battery.

RUMNEY, N. H.—(INS)—A letter addressed to "M. Maxin, 6 Warrington Place, Rumney, Mon.," reached here after a long and wandering journey from Kiev, Russia. After long study of his Atlas, Postmaster George Kelly decided it must have been intended for Rumney, Monmouthshire, England.

CARDINALS WIN LOWER BUCKS COUNTY CROWN; FIRST TIME SINCE 1933; DEFEAT NEWTOWN IN PLAYOFF, 10 TO 1

By Louis Tomlinson

Coach Bill Dougherty and his boys today are the champions of Lower Bucks County in baseball due to their 10-1 victory over the home team today. It was the second straight triumph for the Cards over last year's champs in the tie play-off for the title this year.

Bristol again stepped out to an early lead and proceeded to mount the score as the game grew on with the score reading 8-0 at the end of the fourth inning. Jesse VanZant, with three hits in three times at bat and being hit with a pitched ball on the fourth time up was the leader in the Cards attack at the plate today. Stanley Dick and Jack Spencer were close seconds with 2 out of 3 each. Spencer drove in a pair of runs on his hits and scored one himself, while Dick drove in four on his hits and also scored one run himself.

No one was able to get more than one hit for the home team as Dick, mound choice of Dougherty in a surprise move, mowed the Blue and White batters down with only six hits over the seven-inning stretch. He fanned seven and walked four, but the balk committed by him in the sixth spoiled a shut-out for him as he balked the run in from third. He was aided by good fielding and a pair of snappy double plays on the part of his mates.

Dick was opposed to Jack Janney, Newtown ace, at the start, but Janney was relieved by George Dutton at the start of the third inning after Janney had been reached for five hits and five runs. Dutton finished the game, allowing 5 runs on seven hits. He walked three and fanned three.

Under such a commanding lead and the way Dick was pitching, it was just a "breeze" for the Cardinals who walked to their first Lower Bucks County baseball title since 1933.

Three straight singles and an error by Preston Hill gave the boys of Coach Dougherty a two run advantage at the outset, which they hiked to a 5-run lead with a trio in the second on an error, two more singles, a stolen base, and another error.

Kalencki's single, a sacrifice, and an error produced the lone tally in the third, while a walk, an error, and Spencer's two-run single gave them another pair in the fourth. The fifth and sixth were scoreless, and in the seventh, Spencer and Van Zant singled to score a moment later on Dick's double to left for the last markers.

Newtown's lone tally came in the sixth on singles by Pete Rutherford and Gerry Scott. After Wiggins popped out, Dick balked while working on Janney and Rutherford crossed the plate from third. Then Janney and Maher, batting for Tomlinson, both fanned to end the inning.

The victors will now engage in a three game series with the winners of the Upper County title which was New Hope with the initial game scheduled for Bristol this afternoon. Bill Gallagher will in all probability toe the slab for Bristol while New Hope too will use their ace. The last time Bristol won the Lower Bucks title they matched New Hope, winners of the Upper County league, and beat them in two straight games. Therefore, the visitors from up the County will seek revenge over Coach Dougherty and the boys from Bristol.

LANDRETH DEFEATS R. D. WOOD NINE, 3 TO 2

The losing streak of the Landreth Seeds nine came to a halt last night on its home field as the R. D. Wood team of Florence was nosed out, 3-2, in a hurling match between Turner Ashby and Al Carey. The fray went ten innings.

Splendid fielding and spectacular plays featured the tit throughout. On top of this both hurlers were masterful in the pinches. Only the fact that Carey went wild in the tenth and couldn't locate the plate gave the seedmen the victory.

In that fatal tenth, "Gige" Dougherty hit safely to center, Pursell sacrificed him to second, Griggs went out on a grounder. Harvi was purposely passed. Broderick waited for four bad ones and received them, filling the sacks. Carey worked DeBoskey into a three and two count and then passed him to force in Dougherty with the winning marker.

The Landrethmen lost an opportunity to win the fray in their half of the ninth and were robbed of victory by a sensational catch by Jack Sweeney, Jerseyites' shortstop. With two out, Rockhill lined a Carey pitch to deep left for a double, Woolston knocking down the ball with his gloved hand. Liberatore then dropped to what appeared a sure hit over third, but Sweeney by fast legging managed to make a leaping catch to send the game into an extra inning.

"Vic" Rockhill thrilled the fans in the seventh when he "stole" home to knot the count. Florence was holding a 2-1 lead at the time and appeared certain of victory. But Rockhill was passed and Liberatore sacrificed him to second. A wild pitch advanced the runner to third. After Dougherty fanned, the Florence infield decided to go into a huddle and when they gathered around Carey, Rockhill dashed for the plate and made it easily.

AMELIA EARHART REPORTED MISSING IN PACIFIC

By International News Service
LOS ANGELES, July 3—Repeated distress signals from Amelia Earhart, famous aviatrix adrift in the Pacific Ocean were picked up by amateur radio operators today.
The signals merely repeated, "S O S—KHAQQ, S O S—KHAQQ," the operators said. KHAQQ are the call letters for Miss Earhart's famous "Flying Laboratory."
The plane is down near Howland Island, 2570 miles northwest of New Guinea, from where the aviatrix hopped off last on her round the world flight.
Earlier signals were picked up by ships in the Pacific, which are conducting a feverish search for Miss Earhart and her navigator, Captain Fred Noonan.
In Los Angeles the operators said they first heard the dramatic S.O.S. call at 2:30 a. m. Pacific standard time. The signals became fainter after that, finally fading away, they said.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3—(INS)—Spurred by faint radio signals, indicating that Amelia Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, are alive, Navy planes joined Coast Guard cutters today in the search for the globe-circling plane, drifting in mid-Pacific.
Long hours of dread silence, which jealously guarded the fate of the famed aviatrix and her navigator, were shattered just before midnight when a British man-of-war reported receiving a message from the drifting plane.
"Down but radio working," was the message flashed from the plane.
"Give us a few dots and dashes if you get us," the message added. It was signed with the call letters of Miss Earhart's plane, K. G. A. 2, 2.
The British man-of-war, Achilles, 600 miles south of the Equator near Solomon Islands, flashed the message to the mainland, via Honolulu.
The Achilles reported it picked up the message at 11:28 p. m. (PST).
The Port Shafter Army radio station at Honolulu reported it heard faint signals at the same hour and believed they were from the $80,000 flying laboratory of America's first lady of the air.
The Coast Guard station at Honolulu reported hearing Miss Earhart's carrier wave faintly, but no signals.
The signals were reported on the frequency of 62.10, on which no other stations operate.
Searchers believed that the aviatrix may have succeeded in mooring the plane safely to one of the tiny unnamed coral atolls that dot the Pacific south of Howland Island.
The Navy aircraft tender Swan, near Johnston Island, was ordered to join the Coast Guard cutter Itasca in the search immediately.
Transpacific airlines were silenced as land stations and ship radio operators glued their ears to headphones for further word from the plane, drifting somewhere near desolate Howland Island.

HONOLULU, July 3—(INS)—Nine Naval bombers were ordered into the air from Pearl Harbor naval base today to join the search for Amelia Earhart and her navigator, Capt. Fred Noonan, believed adrift on the Pacific somewhere near the dreary, treeless Howland Island.
The fleet of seaplanes were ordered to join the U. S. Coast Guard cutter Itasca in a desperate search by sea and air for the missing flyers, forced down by lack of fuel yesterday on a 2,570 mile flight from Lea, New Guinea. When trouble overtook them Miss Earhart and her navigator were attempting the longest and most treacherous phase of their round-the-world flight in the famous woman flyer's $80,000 "flying laboratory," a Lockheed Electra low wing monoplane.
Fears for their safety increased hourly as the deadline for the exhaustion of their fuel was long passed and no word reached civilization from their silent radio. At one a. m. (PST) today the two flyers had been missing and unaccounted for for 12 hours.
Head winds were believed to have exhausted Miss Earhart's gasoline supply when she had guided her powerful monoplane within 100 miles of the goal of her long flight over the South Pacific.
The Itasca, stationed near Howland Island, was ordered to begin search after it had received two terse radio

PLAN FOR A PICNIC
LANGHORNE, July 3—A number of questions, assigned to members, were heard answered at the meeting of Middletown Grange, in the Friends' school house, Wednesday evening.
The questions, and those who answered them are: "What shall children's nights be?" Mrs. Hugh B. Webster; "What should the rural standards of living be?" Mrs. Henry C. Pickering; "What service should our community render to our children?" Dr. H. C. Terry.
Two new members were received, Mr. and Mrs. Blaine Patterson.
A committee was named to arrange for the Grange picnic.
Seventh or national degree members, of which this grange has quite a number, were asked to respond to roll call by explaining why all Patrons should strive to enter the higher degrees of the order. Nine of the seventh degree members responded and all of them spoke of the beauty of each degree, all becoming more impressive until climaxed by the national degree.
Members of the grange took part in a general discussion of the question, "Which is the more important in the home, the nail or the needle?"

HONOLULU, July 3—(INS)—Nine Naval bombers were ordered into the air from Pearl Harbor naval base today to join the search for Amelia Earhart and her navigator, Capt. Fred Noonan, believed adrift on the Pacific somewhere near the dreary, treeless Howland Island.
The fleet of seaplanes were ordered to join the U. S. Coast Guard cutter Itasca in a desperate search by sea and air for the missing flyers, forced down by lack of fuel yesterday on a 2,570 mile flight from Lea, New Guinea. When trouble overtook them Miss Earhart and her navigator were attempting the longest and most treacherous phase of their round-the-world flight in the famous woman flyer's $80,000 "flying laboratory," a Lockheed Electra low wing monoplane.
Fears for their safety increased hourly as the deadline for the exhaustion of their fuel was long passed and no word reached civilization from their silent radio. At one a. m. (PST) today the two flyers had been missing and unaccounted for for 12 hours.
Head winds were believed to have exhausted Miss Earhart's gasoline supply when she had guided her powerful monoplane within 100 miles of the goal of her long flight over the South Pacific.

LANGHORNE, July 3—A number of questions, assigned to members, were heard answered at the meeting of Middletown Grange, in the Friends' school house, Wednesday evening.

The questions, and those who answered them are: "What shall children's nights be?" Mrs. Hugh B. Webster; "What should the rural standards of living be?" Mrs. Henry C. Pickering; "What service should our community render to our children?" Dr. H. C. Terry.

Two new members were received, Mr. and Mrs. Blaine Patterson.

A committee was named to arrange for the Grange picnic.

Seventh or national degree members, of which this grange has quite a number, were asked to respond to roll call by explaining why all Patrons should strive to enter the higher degrees of the order.

Members of the grange took part in a general discussion of the question, "Which is the more important in the home, the nail or the needle?"

New Hope Man Ends Life; Uses 12-Gauge Shot Gun

NEW HOPE, July 3—Despondent over unemployment and marital troubles, John D. Eichlin, 47, of Perry and Stockton streets, committed suicide early last evening at his home by shooting himself in the chest with a 12-gauge shotgun.

Eichlin and his wife, Grace, had been estranged for about two weeks. He was arrested Thursday on a disorderly conduct charge and was released at noon yesterday for a hearing last evening before a Lambertville recorder.

When Eichlin returned home shortly before 7 p. m. he found that his wife, who had been at the home of her father, Harry Yos, at Lambertville, had removed some of the household effects. He went to his bedroom and after removing the shoe on his right foot set off the trigger of the gun with his toes.

TYPICAL BUSY DAY IS TOLD OF BY A NURSE

Miss Laura Koch, Red Cross Nurse, Tells of Activities in Morrisville

PROBLEMS NUMEROUS

MORRISVILLE, July 3—A typical day's work, told of by Miss Laura Koch, local Red Cross nurse, shows that a nurse is not only one of the busiest persons in a community, but that she must be first nurse, also dietitian, diplomat, teacher, advisor, and chauffeur, beside filling in other countless duties.

Miss Koch, like so many other nurses, must know how to aid a child in need of glasses, a brace; and must also use tact and speed in coping with serious diseases.

The local Red Cross nurse here tells of a typical busy day:

"One day last week I thought I had a busy morning planned. I had a maternity case to care for, a post operative patient to redress and bathe, and a crippled arthritis patient to make comfortable. Then there was a child who had an appointment in an eye clinic who had no way to get there. I would have to drive him to the clinic as soon as I had finished my other duties.

"Before I left the Community House a boy came in and wanted to know if his mother should take Henry to the hospital to have his infected leg redressed. She thought one of the other children was getting measles. He had a rash the boy said.

"I sent word to keep all the children home, and in a very short time I was in the house. The child had a pin point rash and strawberry tongue, which looked very much like scarlet fever. I helped move him out of the family living room, where the other five children were, into the only room which could be comfortably and completely isolated.

"Then I sent for the doctor and the home was quarantined. It was scarlet fever. I then showed the mother how to care for the sick child and how to take precautions to protect the other children. Then I redressed Henry's leg.

"This family is typical of the many needy cases that we must serve in and around Morrisville. The father has a PWA job, but the child with the infected leg has been an added expense and with five other children, it is really a struggle for them to get along. The mother told me she thought the other child only had the measles and she could not afford to have a doctor.

If she had not been able to call on the Red Cross nursing service, this case might have started an epidemic of scarlet fever.

"Many similar cases could be cited to show the crying need for this service in and around Morrisville. We can only carry on, if we have the support of the people of this community. If everyone will do their part, we of the Red Cross can and will do ours."

Endorses Playgrounds

The playground movement sponsored by Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion, is responsible for the opening of three play centers for children of all ages in Bristol on Tuesday, July 6th. These play centers will provide supervised recreation for the children of our community and will not only teach them directed play, but will give them instruction and tend to their development, both physically and mentally.

The playgrounds will aid in reducing accidents in our borough, and will undoubtedly keep the children off the streets, where they would otherwise play and run, regardless of the danger to life and limb.

Children grouped together under proper supervision on playgrounds learn discipline, respect for the rights of others, co-ordination of brain and muscle, patriotism and love of country.

The playground movement as sponsored by the Americanization Committee of the Bracken Post, American Legion, has my unqualified endorsement and as Burgess of the Borough of Bristol, I trust that the citizens here will co-operate in this worthwhile effort in behalf of our future citizens—the children of our community.

Let us give words of encouragement to those who are furthering this worthwhile project.

CLIFFORD L. ANDERSON, Burgess.

PHILA. STRIKE AFFECTS BRISTOL AND VICINITY

Settlement Reached In Office Of Mayor Wilson After Long Conference

RESUME DELIVERIES

Bristol and vicinity suffered today as the result of a strike in Philadelphia. No Philadelphia morning newspapers were delivered here and deliveries of bread and provisions out of Philadelphia were at a standstill.

By James L. Kilgallen
L. N. S. Staff Correspondent

PHILADELPHIA, July 3—(INS)—A spectacular strike which tied up trucks, forced taxicabs off the streets, caused the suspension of Philadelphia newspapers and threatened to paralyze industry in this city of 2,999,000 population was settled early today in the Mayor's office under dramatic circumstances.

The suddenly called strike was termed a "general holiday." In reality it was the climax to a bitter factional struggle between William Green's American Federation of Labor and John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization for jurisdiction over 25,000 truck drivers. The Joint Teamsters Council No. 53, an A. F. of L. affiliate staged the strike in protest against CIO invasion of the trucking field.

A "status quo" agreement, with the intra-labor warfare to be fought out with ballots, brought the potentially dangerous "holiday" to an end. Under the agreement, employees of two large baking companies will designate by their own ballots whether the CIO or the A. F. of L. will represent them for collective bargaining purposes. Recognition of the CIO by these companies resulted in the mad protest holiday of the A. F. of L.

For hours—throughout the night and early this morning—a great uncertainty and anxiety prevailed in Philadelphia. All trucking operations ceased. Editions of the Philadelphia Inquirer and Philadelphia Record, morning publications, failed to reach newsstands this morning, although both newspapers printed limited editions before temporarily suspending publications.

The strike was threatening to ruin perishable products lying in warehouses and valued at $1,500,000 to $2,000,000. The pre-holiday business of the city's taxicabs was completely halted. All trucks and horse drawn vehicles carrying overland freight such as newspapers, laundry, foodstuffs and general merchandising, were stopped.

An eleven hour exception was in the case of milk and bread deliveries. Mayor S. Davis Wilson spent the night conferring with leaders of both unions and publishers of the city's newspapers. Shortly before five o'clock this morning, he emerged from his office, tired and haggard and announced: "The strike has been settled."

While striving to bring about a settlement, Mayor Wilson deplored "breach of contract" and ordered all police to stay on duty.

He declared he would swear in 10,000 citizens if necessary to keep things moving.

JULY 4TH CELEBRATION HERE 40 YEARS AGO

Horse Racing Was the Main Event According to Newspaper Accounts

MANY SAW THE RACES

A comparison of the celebration of Independence Day of 40 years ago, with that holiday today, shows quite a contrast locally. The Fourth of July, in 1897 also occurred on Sunday, and was observed here on Monday.

Horse racing was the main attraction, an article in the "Bucks County Gazette" of July 8th, that year, telling of a "Great Day at the Driving Park"—"A Big Crowd and Fine Races".

The drawing card of the day was apparently the match race between E. W. Minister's Lady V. and Len. Acker's Intricket for a purse of $200. But fate ruled that this event should be marred by an accident.

In the account of the affair which attracted a thousand to the park the following was given:

"The races at the Bristol Driving Park held on the fifth are now a thing of the past. The event showed that some horses are faster than others and that the people did not care how warm the weather was as it was not too hot for over a thousand of them to turn out and view the races. The grandstand presented a beautiful and animated appearance. The large majority of its occupants were ladies who took a deep interest in the events. The

SATURDAY, JULY 3, 1937

JULY 3TH

Liberty is a priceless heritage. Few are the peoples who have proved worthy to receive it.

One hundred and sixty-one years ago in the founding of the American Republic, a new experiment was begun in government. The names of the men who prepared the Declaration of Independence still are held in reverence. They crystallized sentiments which had been dear to aspiring humanity for centuries. They handed on a tradition which has been safeguarded as precious from generation to generation since.

These are solemn considerations and should bring to us a conviction of deep responsibility.

The example of the American people in declaring their independence and founding a new democracy gave strong incentive to many to follow their example. All over Europe the spirit of liberty was quickened. Something of an advance was made, but in America alone were the gains lasting and progressive.

This Fourth of July dawns in a world dangerously disturbed, in a tumult of political unrest and uncertainty. Hopes for world peace inspired by international agreements seem frustrated. In many places liberty established at great cost has yielded to oppression. Friends of liberty again look imploringly to America.

The determination frequently is asserted that Americans will not again fight for the liberty of others. The responsibility is all the greater that here in our own land we maintain with dignity and with the invincible force of the people's will, expressed through orderly Government, the principles of liberty established by the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States.

The Fourth of July fittingly is a day for celebration, for rejoicing.

Well may it be also a time for thoughtful consideration of the duties and responsibilities of citizenship in this great nation.

YOUTHFUL GOOD CITIZENS

Announcement that 25,000 husky boys have moved into the Nation's Capital to stage a "jamboree" caused no apprehension. Every one of these youngsters is a Boy Scout. The Boy Scout is a disciplined, trained, instructed citizen.

The whole world is contributing to the success of the big jamboree. Every state in the Union and 24 foreign nations are represented. The common bond among them is the practical, sensible, inspiring spirit of scouting.

There is a peculiar cohesiveness in this that scarcely has been achieved by other international organizations. Lord Robert Baden-Powell, the originator of the Boy Scout movement, brought together a group of English boys and taught them the basic principles of scouting. Soon he discovered that he had hit upon the makings of a world-wide brotherhood.

"We are," said he, "something more than a league; we are a brotherhood. Every Scout is a brother to every other Scout."

The Scouts holding their big convention in Washington will learn much of the dignity and grandeur and influence of Government. And it would mean much to the safety of civilization if the rulers of the nations would catch something of that spirit which animates the Scout movement.

FRIENDS' PEACE WORKER WILL GIVE A MESSAGE

Richard R. Wood to Speak in Bristol M. E. Church, Sunday Morning

SUNDAY MEETINGS

Bristol M. E. Church

Sunday, July 4th: 9:45, Church School, James S. Douglass, superintendent; 10:50, morning worship, Richard R. Wood, executive secretary of the Friends Peace Committee, and a world traveler, will be the speaker; 6:45 p. m., union youth service; 7:45, union service, the Rev. A. G. Sollia, preacher.

Mr. Wood, who will speak at the morning service, has been since 1923 executive secretary of the Friends' Peace Committee. He was educated at Haverford College, with some postgraduate work at Harvard University and taught mathematics on the Pacific Coast before taking up the present work. His war service was reconstruction work with the Mission Anglo-Americaine de la Societe des Amis in the devastated regions of Eastern France. Since that time he has made three extended trips through Central Europe, and has visited England. In the autumn of 1935 he attended many sessions of both the Assembly and the Council of the League of Nations at Geneva, many of which dealt with the difficult situation between Italy and the League at the time.

"BLACK ORCHIDS" by F. V. W. MASON

SYNOPSIS

Ian Gray, First Secretary to the American Minister to Austria, is concerned over the infatuation of his colleague, Leonard Holt, for the notorious Countess Lolita von Waldeck. . . . But, when Ian meets the Countess at the Austrian Ministry, he, too, is fascinated by her beauty and cannot understand how one so lovely and naive could cause the tragedy and heart break with which she is credited. He asks her if she realizes that because of her, Leonard is jeopardizing his position and his engagement to Ilya Zichonyi, lovely daughter of a Hungarian Minister. Lolita mockingly replies, "I am going to devour your helpless little lamb to the last bit of wool." Much to Ian's surprise, she invites him to her cousin's residence the next afternoon, asking him to say nothing to Leonard. Try as he might, Leonard could not refuse. While they are talking, Colonel Sobeloff of the Bulgarian Royal Guards, breaks in upon them, flashing a revolver and crying, "Lolita has been fooled her last lover." Ian tells her with a blow. The Colonel threatens revenge. Later, that night, the first half of the Magyar-American Trade Treaty regarding Soviet goods is stolen from the safe in Ian's office. The only clue to the thief is a scarf scented with Orchidee Noires, Lolita's perfume, which Ian is horrified to note belongs to Leonard. Back at his apartment, Ian tells Leonard he would like to speak with him. The latter excuses himself for a moment and goes into the bedroom. Shortly after, Leonard hears a shot, and rushing inside he finds Leonard slumped in a chair, a smoking revolver nearby. On the desk is Leonard's confession of the theft and a warning to Ian to avoid Lolita. Leonard's condition is critical. The shooting is kept secret and Ian only hopes Mr. King, the American minister will not ask for the treaty. If he does, the sordid story must be told.

CHAPTER X

Every time the officer's door opened, a dozen devils within Ian jabbed at the base of his brain with needle-pointed lances of anxiety. Every time an office boy bustled in to drop a sheaf of documents on his desk he felt his fingers stiffen, and his mouth go dry.

From where came the leaden weight that held back the hands of the clock? Today was Saturday, thank God, and the office would shut at twelve sharp! Now it was eleven sixteen. Forty-four minutes more.

He must have betrayed some nervousness he realized on noting Baskerville whose office was directly across the hall, peering fixedly at him once or twice. He had hoped to win the first step in his struggle when there came a summons from Mr. King and, like a man who marches out to face a firing squad, Ian pushed back his swivel chair and got up.

"Tell Mr. King I'll be in directly," he instructed the boy and paused to draw a glass of water. Somehow it steadied him and when he entered the Minister's elaborately furnished office he in no whit differed from the Ian Gray of every day.

"You had a good time last night, Baskerville tells me."

A good time! "Yes, sir," Ian said. "Sit down Gray, sit down. Now regarding that X-2 Treaty," began Mr. King, joining finger tips before his shrewd ruddy face and peering up a little shortsightedly. "We've got to be mighty careful about it. Baron Nagy called me a few minutes ago and in confidence informed me that certain Soviet agents are known to be in Budapest at present. Also he had information that they've caught wind about the treaty. Said they wanted a copy no matter at what cost."

"Yes sir," Ian managed to reply and wondered if he had lost color. "I'll be extra careful, sir."

The American Minister tilted back in his chair and fixed his pale blue eyes on the green chestnuts whose broad leaves fluttered just outside the window.

"I've been thinking about paragraph three. It needs revision—not clear enough to suit me. Get it out of the safe and let's take a look at it."

As though an electric wire had come in contact with his scalp, the hair on the back of Ian's neck commenced to tingle, but his voice was perfectly steady as he said pleasantly, "Yes sir, but that will be a long job and it's half past eleven now. Paragraph thirty-two needs correction also. It's a shorter job. Perhaps you would like to look at that and let the other go until Monday?"

The remark was shrewdly calculated, for all the Ministry knew that Elias King played golf of a Saturday and that in all probability the Anglo-Magyar golf club would be crowded on such a fine spring day. Ian's pulse rate dropped to a slightly higher than normal when Mr. King briefly inclined his narrow, iron gray head.

"Maybe you're right, Gray. Bring in the second part of the treaty—we've time for that much anyhow." Then he dashed Ian's rising hopes by saying, "You'd better bring the first part to my house tonight, we can work there—at eleven sharp. Hate to spoil your Saturday night but this is important."

Eleven o'clock! That left just twelve hours of grace.

Exactly twenty minutes after the Ministry closed, Ian stood waiting in the ante-chamber of Ilya Zichonyi's stately home. Presently she appeared darkly beautiful and hands extended in joyous welcome.

"How very nice—what a pleasure, mon Soldat!" (she had gotten the nickname from Leonard) "I have not seen you in a week."

Then, from the gravity of his bearing she sensed that something was wrong and her narrow black brows rose a little.

"But Soldat—qu'est-ce qu'il y a?" Her eyes, slightly oblique as are the eyes of so many Hungarians, widened and beneath her golden white skin the color receded a little. "What is wrong? Not Leonard?"

"I am forced a reassuring smile that drove none of the sharp anxiety from the faintly Tartar-like features of Leonard's fiancée.

"Yes—Leonard—he's—well; I will tell you about it, my dear, but first you must promise to say nothing. There are reasons, good reasons, why this must be kept quiet."

She made a brief impatient gesture. "Leonard is in danger?" It was terrible how the anxiety and fear became stamped on Ilya's sensitive features. "Quick, tell me! You know I would give my life for Leonard ten times a day."

He laid a steady hand upon her wrist. "Easy, easy, Ilya, Leonard's hurt himself."

In the ante-room sounded a little gasp as the black haired Hungarian girl straightened, pale as a tombstone, but very self-possessed.

"How—how badly is he hurt?" She gripped the back of a chair and fixed him with a tragic regard. "Tell me—is he—dead?"

"Lord no! He's past the crisis but he's still in danger. He was fooling with his pistol last night and it went off."

Into the strained, jet eyes before him darted a joy indescribable. How she must love Leonard! It—it would kill her if the truth came out. Well, he wouldn't let it.

"What do you want me to do, Ian? You know you have only to command."

Ian's heart warmed to this level-headed patrician—where most girls would have flown into hysterics and wept uselessly, she stood erect and self-possessed. What an utter ass Leonard was to throw away a fiancée like this! He must have been out of his head to expose this splendidly vital girl to ridicule and pity.

"Get your hat and coat," he said, "and make some excuse to be away this afternoon. Dr. Crane wants someone to spell the regular nurse."

She was out of the room before he finished the sentence and came back, her features tragic as she pulled on a black cloth coat and a becoming little cloche hat.

"You may rely upon me, Ian," she said. "We Zichonyis have been soldiers and soldiers' wives for a thousand years. I will not faint or do anything silly. What shall I say when he becomes conscious?"

"Merely tell him that you understand and that you love him. You do, don't you?"

Proudly the small head went back. "With all my heart and soul."

Meanwhile, he relied on her to do her part.

He paused at the curb and flung open the door, touched and admiring her self-possession as she got out and with short, quick steps hurried into the building. Then Ian put the big car in gear and rolled off, doubtfully determined. It was worth a bitter fight to save the ideals and happiness of such a girl.

As Ian idled about a certain smart flower shop on the Andrassy Ut waiting for a corsage of the florist's loveliest and rarest orchids to be made up, he started. A large and suspicious-looking policeman had halted outside and was peering fixedly in through the window. Ian's heart missed a beat—had Mr. King suddenly decided to forego his golf and returned to the Ministry to finish work on that infernal second paragraph?

He forced himself to gaze in polite but detached curiosity at the square face and buffalo-horn moustaches of the saber-carrying policeman outside. Subconsciously, he noted there was something familiar about the cut of that khaki uniform and abruptly realized that it was an old American army uniform made over. Just then the voice of the fat little woman behind the counter struck his ear. When he turned she smiled up at him with little golden rings in her ears bobbing cheerfully.

"That is Heer Schlantz of the police," he loves mein Rosa. Ah, to be young again and have such a big, fine man to beat one on one's wedding night!"

When a small, rather anemic looking girl appeared from the back of the shop, the gazing policeman saluted elaborately and clicked his heels at the same time. Then, satisfied that all was well, he swaggered off, twirling his moustaches and sternly ordering an urchin out of the street.

Ian felt better and, after tucking the square box under his arm, bestowed on the bewildered florist's wife a bill that left a preposterous tip.

"Ach," she exclaimed, beaming on the pallid Rosa, "this business of flowers is a crazy one; half the customers are blind with grief. The other half, like this so handsome Englishman, are so blind with love they care not what they are doing. Look Rosa, ezer pengoe!"

But Ian's thoughts were far from loving. Five hours of grace were yet his. Desperate as any poor rogue with a posse at his heels, he climbed into his two seater and drove for the street on which Lolita von Waldeck had given her address.

He patted his shoulder lightly, reassured to feel the familiar .32 was in place. Didn't want to be melodramatic, but he'd get pretty ugly if they drove him to it. By heaven, he would save Ilya's and Leonard's pretty little romance from a hideous end! How ironical it was—going with flowers and a smile to a rendezvous with one who had nearly ruined his career.

As he whirled the motor along the sunlit streets, past busy markets, past booths where faded old women sold fresh young flowers, he smiled bleakly. "Somebody ought to write a play about this."

"Shouldn't wonder," he told himself, "but Lolita and her jolly little cousin—if he is her cousin—aren't tangled up with the Soviets? In that case they're pretty sure to make a play for the other half of the treaty."

Though his brain staggered in an effort to foresee every contingency, to one who might have seen him driving along he seemed nothing but a smartly dressed young man out for a spin.

As Ian strode across the sidewalk after parking his car he drew himself to full height and, with a hand that trembled ever so slightly, pulled the bronze bell lever of number 73. Funny he felt much as he had when he went into his first big football game in the Stadium back at Cambridge . . . as he had that night before Siechepez; same surging pulses, same tingling finger tips and same desire to yawn. Well this was a game, too, with more than life for a prize. Prison, disgrace and oblivion were the penalties for losing.

In the depths of the concierge's lodge a bell's small silvery voice tinkled, ringing up the curtain on a drama that would not end until the stolen part of Treaty X-2 was recovered or Ian Gray was helpless.

to a carefree holiday.

Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre said the President had no set engagements, leaving the first executive to explore his property, swim in the pool and entertain his neighbors. Mrs. Roosevelt, the wives of James and Elliot, and John, youngest son, remained at the Hyde Park house.

Amelia Earhart Reported Missing In Pacific

messages from Miss Earhart's plane. In one she announced that only half hour's fuel supply was left in the monoplane's tanks and "cannot make landfall." In the other message she gave a sketchy description of the plane's bearings yesterday at 8:43 a. m. (12:43 p. m. P. S. T.).

On orders from Admiral William D. Leahy at Washington, the fleet of sea-planes were fueled for the takeoff on the 1,800 mile flight to Howland Island. Refueling arrangements have been made on an indefinite schedule, it was announced, with fast Navy vessels following the planes with additional supplies of gasoline and oil.

Four days of fair flying weather were predicted here for the Howland Island area.

Several fast destroyers, stationed here at the naval base, and the cutter Roger Taney were being held in readiness to join the search.

First word of Miss Earhart's peril came from the cutter Itasca as it awaited at the tiny two-mile-long Howland Island for the arrival of the noted aviatix and her companion. Earlier messages from Miss Earhart's plane had been weak and difficult to read, the Itasca reported.

Miss Earhart, first woman to fly the Atlantic, was guiding her plane across the long Pacific stretch by blind reckoning, for there was no radio beam to guide the flight.

Naval officers said it was possible that Miss Earhart might have "overshot" the island. If the ship landed in the northwest quadrant of the island and is still adrift it is drifting at the rate of two knots an hour toward the Gilbert Islands, 420 miles West of Howland, the Itasca reported here by radio.

Small craft ply the inter-island freight route in this area, and one of the ships may rescue the two flyers.

Miss Earhart carried a rubber lifeboat and life belts in her plane when she took off from Miami, Fla., June 1 on the world-encircling flight.

With the buoyancy of empty, air-filled gasoline tanks, Miss Earhart's plane could remain aloft for at least six hours, naval observers here said. Officials of the Lockheed Corporation said the ship could stay on the surface indefinitely, however, depending on the roughness of the seas.

ODD FELLOWS BEGIN BID FOR 2ND HALF CROWN

"Bob" Sutton's Odd Fellows nine began its bid for the second half crown of the Bristol Twilight League by beating the Superior Zinc Corporation nine, 7-2, last evening on Lee-dom's field.

For four frames the tilt was a hurling match between Hal Snyder and Elijah Bragg with the Zinc Company leading, 1-0, thanks to a walk and two hits in the first. But Bragg blew up in the fifth and before the side was out, six Odd Fellows had crossed the plate.

Alex Dewsnap and Fred Hibbs made five of the winners' nine hits. The losers had seven safe blows off Snyder.

EDGELY BRAVES QUIT TRENTON CITY LEAGUE

Having withdrawn from the Trenton City League, the Edgely Braves will begin to play independent ball tomorrow afternoon on its home diamond, Edgely avenue and Haines road, when they meet the strong Philadelphia Visitation nine.

Manager Fred Hibbs is using virtually the same line-up that played in the Trenton League with the exception of the catching post. Jesse Vanzant will do the receiving in place of Vic Kilpack.

The rest of the team will see "Billy" Leish at first; Heftman, second; Carlin, short; Joe Roe, third; Leo Hibbs, left; Andy Pfaffenrath, right; and the Watson, in center. Manager Hibbs uses himself for utility.

It is most likely that Punkie Zeffries will toss them in for the Braves. Punkie had a good average against the Trenton teams, and should beat the Visitation club.

Game is scheduled to begin at three o'clock sharp.

BRISTOL A. A. NINE TO PLAY THE FISHER CLUB

Era of Sport Supermen

By BURNLEY

Perhaps Messrs. H. G. Wells and G. B. Shaw have a monopoly on the superman theme, though old boy Nietzsche beat them to the punch nearly a century ago.

Anyway, the humble sports writers might be able to contribute a few interesting ideas on the emergence of the new super-colossal humanity.

Comparative records in sport annals would seem to prove that the human race is improving athletically, if nothing else. Track and field marks continue to fall and old-timers shake their heads in bewilderment when they hear of 15-foot pole vaults, near-4-minute miles and near-9-second century marks. Not so long ago 13 feet was considered the pole vault ceiling!

Swimming records go by the boards just as fast. Weissmuller's old marks, which they thought would last for many years, are nearly all forgotten now. Even Eleanor Holm Jarrett's recent backstroke standards have all been erased from the books by some European lass.

In golf, the advance is, if anything, more rapid. Just 13 years ago, Cyril Walker copped the National Open with a score of 297. He was the only man in the field to break 300. In the last National Open, thirty-seven golfers cracked 300, and 297 finished in twenty-ninth place.

Looks like the supermen of sport are already here.

HOLMESBURG TO OPPOSE THE LANDRETH NINE

Holmesburg A. A. on the Quaker City League, will be the opposition of the Landreth Seeds nine tomorrow afternoon on the local diamond. The seedsmen will be shooting for their fourth straight triumph.

"Bill" Grindle, Eddington youth who has made his mark as a hurler for the Holmesburg team and has been pitching there for five years, is expected to toe the slab against the Bristol club. Grindle has been the mainstay of the hill corps of the Holme team and this season is boasting of one of his best years.

The visiting club also has some powerful hitters in "Bill" Vogt, Art DePalma, and "Vic" Christy. DePalma is noted for his ability to hit the pinch-hits while Vogt and Christy are distance clubbers.

Manager Dave Landreth is undecided as to whom he will start on the peak against the visiting aggregation. His pitchers, Howie Black, Heisley, Ashby, Carey and Henry have all rested for a week and are ready for action.

"Jack" Broderick will do the receiving with Frank Griggs on first; "Eddie" Liberatore will handle second base with Eddie DeBoskey, short, and Gige Dougherty, third base.

The outfield will have "Sid" Purcell, "Vic" Rockhill, and Bill Harwi. Rockhill is now in his stride and is socking the apple at a fast clip. Over last week he collected seven hits in eight trips to the plate. Harwi is also hitting the pill better than he was at the beginning of the season.

The largest crowd of the season is expected to be on hand to watch the localities in their stride. Game is scheduled to begin at three o'clock sharp.

LEGION JUNIORS LOSE TO NEWTOWN NINE, 7-6

By "Chart" Tomlinson

Bristol A. L. lost a very thrilling and interesting ball game last night on Newtown's diamond by the score of 7-6. Manager Hems selected Vance Betz, who had not lost a game up until last night, as his starting moundman. His opponent was Walker. Betz had three games and no losses up until last night's game. He tried to keep his team-half in the game when in the first half of the sixth with two outs. Betz hit a long triple to right field only to come home on Hennessy's error at third. His hit was the longest of the day as it bounced out on the road in the air.

SIX FAST DOUBLE PLAYS AID SEEDSMEN TO WIN

Six fast double-plays aided the Landreth Seeds in adding another victory to its long list last night as they trimmed the Kensington team, of the Philadelphia City League, 7-3.

The two-play killings were necessary in order for the Landreth to win, for "Mel" Heisley was continually getting himself into hot water by his wildness. Time and time again, Heisley would pass batters only to have that fast infield come up with two-killings and stave off the rallies.

Five consecutive hits in the fourth gave the "Seedlets" a quartet of runs and put the game on ice. The Bristol club has a total of fourteen hits off Odair and Mayer, Kensington twirlers, and "Glee" Dougherty was the leader at the plate with three safe knocks. Kensington had seven hits.

Manager Landreth announced last night that he will play Holmesburg tomorrow, Stroudsburg under the lights next Wednesday, and Beach Haven under the lights next Friday night. The following day he will go to Cape May.

Liberty Cornet Band held a position near the center and between the events furnished excellent music.

"There was however one obstacle to the complete enjoyment of the day's races, and that was the crowding of the people on the track at the wire. Starting Judge Cooper called one race off because the crowd would not keep back far enough to allow sufficient room to come under the wire abreast. This trouble will be obviated in the future however by the placing of a stout railing in front of the grandstand, or by roping in the ground. The races started at about two o'clock with Dr. William Cooper, of Trenton, starting judge; James T. Fabian, of Tullytown; and Dr. Niffin, of Trenton, in the judges' box . . .

"The great drawing card of the day was the match race between E. W. Minster's Lady V. and Len. Acker's Intriket for a purse of $200. The event was marred by what might have been a very serious accident. Just as the two horses came up to the wire on the last lap of the first heat the sulksies got fouled, and resulted in the upsetting of the pole one and throwing out the driver, Len. Acker, who drives his own horse, and dragging him along the track a short distance . . . The heat was won by Intriket, but the following three were easily captured by Lady V. . .

"The one-quarter mile foot-race between Charles Bennett, of Tullytown, and Patrick Cavanaugh, of Trenton, was won by Bennett in one minute. The 100-yard dash between A. N. McLees, of Morrisville, and Joe Curren and Charles Cline, of Bristol, was won by Cline, in 11 seconds.

"There are several parties in Bristol who want to match Len Acker's horse

Intriket, over any one mile track with E. W. Minster's Lady V., for a purse of $500.

"John and Will Murray of Bensalem, will match their mare Louise C., against Lady V. for a purse of $100."

According to the paragraphs of the Gazette many other residents participated in excursions by boat and trolley to Willow Grove, Torresdale Park, and elsewhere.

It was also told that "H. B. Beatty celebrated the day in the old-fashioned manner, as usual, by keeping up a fusillade of crackers during the day, and a fine display of fireworks in the evening, which a large number of his friends were invited to witness from the porches. After the fireworks, a Virginia reel was indulged in by the guests on the lawn. A large street organ, turned by a bronzed son of Italy, furnished the music."

On that Independence Day anniversary, 40 years ago, the schooner "Studio" with "Old Glory" and the Cuban flag floating from the masthead, was tied up at the Wharf above Market street. The vessel, the property of Captain S. Drake Miller, a man who had done service in the Cuban cause, was visited by many localities. The visitors enjoyed the display of curios which Captain Miller had on the schooner, and many were the holiday visitors.

National All-Stars Have Edge in Pitching Power

Although the American league All-Star team is conceded to have the greatest batting power, the National league All-Star team has the edge in pitching strength with Dizzy Dean, Carl Hubbell and Van Lingle Mungo hurling. Other luminaries who will be in the National lineup at Washington on July 7 are Jimmie Collins, first baseman of the Chicago Cubs; Mel Ott, Giant outfielder; Gabby Hartnett, catcher of the Chicago Cubs; Arky Vaughan, Pittsburgh infielder, and Joe Medwick, St. Louis Cardinals' outfielder.
